Everyone loves a good pet story. Bruce the deerhound was the resident dog at Glenkinchie Distillery and became vitally important in its every day running. Keeping pests away and being an all-round good boy were his top responsibilities.

If you’ve got a guitar that’s made from a Talisker whisky barrel just like Scottish songstress KT Tunstall, you know you’re a proper rock star.

We have used inspiration from song writing to string together a cocktail that wouldn’t be out of place in a rock concert on a stormy summers’ night in Carbost.

Who is one of the most famous Lagavulin fans on the planet? Nick Offerman. His love has gone as far as collaborating with us, helped by some cheeky inspiration from his father, to create his own limited edition bottling not so long ago...

A master at crafting surreal and magical literature, writer Haruki Murakami offers his own interpretation of the Striding Man himself. A key character in the novel Kafka on the Shore, Johnnie Walker (hat and all) plays a big part in the story and in Murakami fashion, he is not quite what you were expecting...

Talk about pioneering women. Taking charge of the stills at Cardhu, Helen Cumming, always made sure she had fresh bread baking to disguise the smell of fermentation from the excise men and the tax inspectors. Developing a flag system for other distillers, she would even have a specific colour if HMRC were nearby. Helen and her family have had a profound influence on Cardhu and Johnnie Walker.
ROCKET POWERED AIR-MAIL

Drawing inspiration from an award-winning Scottish cult movie. Gerhard Zucker, was a real man who made real rockets. Helping to develop some cutting-edge rocket science on the islands in the North West to deliver mail and important messages to remote communities. A wee dram after a rocket launch would have gone down a treat.

We all recognise the unique colour pattern of the Johnnie Walker range, but how was this portrayed when advertising the whiskies? The talented theatre and costume designer Doris Zinkeisen gave us the brush strokes that painted the beautiful liveries throughout the advertising of Johnnie Walker for the first time.
